In Vienna, said Gustav Mahler, the use of the word 'tradition' is usually a excuse for Schlampelei. That, however, is not a fully-rounded view. Not everyone will support such a negative view and that's coming from a professional musician. The so-called 'tradition' is just over eighty years old, invented by Vienna Philharmonic to maintain status under the Hitler regime and decorated with all manner of Nazi arrangements. Daniel Barenboim's involvement does not cleanse what Viennese musicians themselves refer to as their 'brown past'. However, this soon changed when popularity of ¾ timed Waltz became overwhelming, setting it as a standard and spreading its influence all over the Europe. That horrible noun combines physical and mental laziness with a dash of menace. Their waltz music echoed through the halls of Vienna, Austria and Germany, spreading all across Europe and destroying the sentiment that this dance was immoral and scandalous. By the end of 16th century people of Vienna embraced Waltz and morphed it into dance called Weller, and France used form called Nizzarda. Points of interest in this area Source: The Free Jazz Collective. The concert serves as brand advertising for a tourist-trap Vienna, a place of pleasure that easily turns nasty. One of the major causes for the popularity rise of ¾ time waltz was phenomenal music creations of Johann Strauss and Franz Lanner. Before that time, all court dances were rigid, stately, solemn, procession-based, very tightly controlled, with complicated moves and timings. United States accepted waltz during mid-19th century, and by early 20th century it became dances everywhere. The Philharmonic do that better than anyone. Sadly, newborn craze of Foxtrot almost completely destroyed the popularity of Waltz after the end of WW1, especially in United States where it was completely overshadowed by other dances after 1921. Here are some of the most popular: Contemporary ballroom dance, aka Viennese Waltz International Standard Waltz American Style Waltz The Scandinavian Waltz The Mexican Waltz The Valse Musette The cross-step waltz (French Valse Boston) The Cajun Waltz A London orchestral player offers the following defence of Vienna's New Year's Day jamboree: The Vienna NYD concert is unique and it should stay that way! If anyone fails to realise what makes this concert so great is its tradition, not only in its choice of repertoire but the way it's played! If you want to hear on New Year's Day the same style of concerts we hear all year round, same Mahler, Bruckner, and so on then go elsewhere! The way this orchestra performs this music is unparalleled and rightly so they should stick to their traditions. Waltz changed that with the introduction of free form dance with close position of dances, which immediately sparked revolt and scandals from traditional lovers of old ballroom dance. Many other orchestras (practically everywhere) have attempted to copy this tradition and every concert ended up as an opportunity to trash this music that is so hard to perform, to get the right balance, style, rubato, timing, making it sound effortless! "Similar" concerts by other leading orchestras ended up as gig events, on many occasions with just one rehearsal being "sufficient" to put together a show! They always ended up sounding that way and it's an insult to treat this kind of music in this way! This orchestra is unique in performing this music every year and there's still around 50% of the repertoire to be performed which has never been performed yet! I do not support such an article, and correct is the fact that certain conductors will only dream of getting on that podium, no matter who they are! Other great conductors who sadly passed away never made it on that podium on 1st January and there are reasons for it, the orchestra knows who they can trust to bring off such an event and they have the full right to decide, with no pressures whatsoever from anyone! They got this one right and it's here to stay! It's their own yearly biggest event in the diary and they are very proud of it. During the time of First World War, waltz dance routines become much more relaxed, with dancers dancing much closer to each other than before. One of the most influential dances that managed to do just that is waltz, that was first danced in location of modern Germany and Austria between 13th and 18th century, before managing to reach modern ballrooms where it revolutionized dance fashion and becoming one of the most popular dances on planet Earth. The original form of Waltz was first used by 13th century peasants in Germany, who devised rolling folk dance that was quite different from all court dances that were popular in that time. After 18th century came, France became in love with the Waltz form called allemande, dance in which dances were separated one from another. Music is in the air and in the Viennese soul. Music fans engage with the heritage of famous composers and a live music scene comprising every genre. The basis of the New Year's Day concert is playing a 3/4 waltz with a particular Viennese twist. But the artistic value of this peacock display is limited. Their folk dance filled with rolls, glides and turns was received well, and by 1500s it reached Volta where it was adapted with styles of other local dances. During its long history, waltz was danced in many styles and variations. Modern form of Waltz was born in suburbs of Vienna and mountain regions of Austria, and was created not for use by folk dancers, but for court. You can read a full account of its unpleasant political origins here.
